STARDOM can be a drug — but these celebs were accused of having the real thing!
Nashville legend Cash was caught by U.S.
Customs agents bringing "pep pills and tranquilizers" back from Mexico in 1965.
Meanwhile, Fonda was arrested in 1970 after entering Cleveland from Canada carrying pills. In 1980, McCartney was busted for pot in Japan. Mars was nailed for cocaine in Sin City in 2010, two years after CSI star Dourdan was collared for narcotics in Palm Springs.
"Baywatch's" Bleeth was caught with cocaine in 2001 and Ziggy Stardust, aka David Bowie, was arrested for pot possession in 1976

HEY'RE rich, famous and beautiful – and think they can get away with anything!
From silent film funnyman Fatty

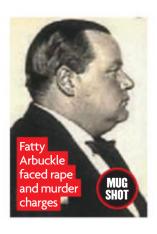

Arbuckle's rape and murder rap to homemaking mogul Martha Stewart's insider trading-related conviction to starlet Lindsay Lohan's repeated transgressions, celebrities have long found themselves on the wrong side of the law.

The shocking legal lapses are baffling.

Why do so many stars, with so much at their fingertips, go so wrong?

"Because they can," says behavior expert Dr. Lillian Glass.
"Fame and fortune have a way of going to people's heads. There is a definite sense of entitlement that comes with being a celebrity.

"They feel that the laws don't apply to them" and are "confident those in authority will look the other way" and "see them as being special. When celebrities realize they aren't so special after all, they fall hard."

BUT UNTIL THEN, it's a wild ride of power and privilege. Thanks to entourages motivated by money and fame-hungry groupies, their slightest whim is only a phone call away.

And that kind of instant gratification can be as big a danger as it is an ego boost.

"It can become a compulsion, making fame and celebrity as addictive as any drug," explains mental health counselor Veronica Lee Tsai, the primary therapist at a noted

Florida drug and alcohol treatment center. "It's a form of narcissism that can drive you to extreme behavior – heroin, pill popping and cocaine binges – because you feel invulnerable."

And that sense of being super-human even survives an arrest. When nabbed red-handed, most celebs refuse to accept blame or accountability, says Glass.

"Most people know the consequences of their actions, but celebrities know no such bounds," she explains. "They are in denial for a very long time and continue to blame others for their predicament.

"Look at Lohan and Stewart. They both believed they were above the law. And when they were caught, they refused to take responsibility and instead blamed everyone but themselves."

Of course, playing the blame game is not a new phenomenon, but the consequences have changed. These days, spinning a good story is almost as good as getting off the hook.

But that wasn't the case back in the day. Despite being acquitted of the 1921 >

THE CELEB SLAP HEARD AROUND THE WORLD!

HOLLYWOOD diva Zsa Zsa Gabor smacked Beverly Hills motorcycle cop Paul Kramer across the face during a traffic stop on June 14, 1989 – and became the original poster girl for entitled celebrity.

The hapless lawman's offense?

Kramer had the audacity to stop the Hungarianborn movie star, then 72, as she breezed through town in her $215,000 Rolls Royce Corniche convertible sporting expired tags. Naturally, he asked to see her driver's license, too. Turns out, that wasn't valid, either.

Still, Gabor felt she was getting a raw deal. Insisting she was a victim, the spoiled beauty explained she'd been pulled over by cops before – and recalled they "usually say, 'Zsa Zsa, what's the matter? Are you married these days? Do you want to marry me?" and let her slide.

But this guy was not smitten by her charms. Kramer wanted to write some tickets. So the situation quickly escalated. Zsa Zsa, now 97 and in a coma, insisted the lawman cursed at her as tempers flared.

In response, she slapped him, knocking his sunglasses off. Of course, the cop had a different version of events.

But there's no doubt the confrontation ended with Gabor in cuffs, charged with battery on an officer, disobeying an officer, driving without registration, driving without a license and having an open container of alcohol – a silver flask of Jack Daniels whiskey.

After a three-week circus trial and a scolding by a livid municipal judge, the actress was fined $13,000, ordered to get a psychiatric exam, do 120 hours community service – and spend three days behind bars.

She did her time in the El Segundo city jail. As she strolled out of prison holding a rose, the actress was asked if she'd learned a lesson and responded: "Never!"

rape-murder of aspiring actress Virginia Rappe, Arbuckle, once Hollywood's highest paid actor, became box office poison. Shortly before he died penniless at the age of 46, the comic said: "I don't understand it, one minute, I'm the guy everybody loves, and the next, I'm the guy everybody loves to hate."

But now an arrest and conviction is hardly a career death sentence.

Incredibly, Winona Ryder got a career boost when she was busted on shoplifting charges in 2001. She insisted the pressure of stardom drove her to steal things – and take drugs, too!

She was forgiven her crimes by the public. And now a host of reality TV stars are discovering the same phenomenon!

With little to no discernable talent, the reality rat pack has learned any publicity is good publicity – and naughty antics attract ratings.

"Reality stars love to get into trouble," says Glass. "No one wants to watch a show about an unintelligent and talentless person. But when you add drama, the whole dynamic changes.

"New Jersey 'Housewife' Teresa Giudice epitomizes the mindset of this new breed of celebrity. She's locked up in a federal prison for fraud. But you can bet she's going to make millions upon her release. Her time behind bars may turn out to be the best thing that could have happened to her!"

Shocked? Fed-up?

Well, Glass says it's up to fans to change the prevailing perception that celebrity crime pays. We can't be tolerant of crooked stars or the businessmen eager to sweep their misdeeds under the carpet to protect mega-dollar investments.

Says Glass: "Only when we turn them off and tune them out will celebrities – hopefully – learn their lesson." ■

JERSEY GIRL DANIELES COCAINE NICHTAAADE

Teresa's tiny cell is a far cry from the 10,000-square-foot mansion she once called home. Ironically, the reality star once complained that it "scheeved" her to live in a house where other people had previously lived – and now she must share her cramped cell with three other women!

But Teresa did receive one bit of good news shortly after entering the lockup: Her release date is set for Feb. 5, 2016, which means she'll be getting out a full two months early.

Living as Beverly Ann Merrill (above), Jersey girl Danielle Staub was busted delivering a kilo of cocaine! FORMER "Real Housewives of New Jersey" drama queen Danielle Staub's seedy past puts even her TV theatrics to shame! In 1986, Staub, who then went by the name Beverly Ann Merrill but used the alias Angela Minelli, was right in the middle of a kidnapping triggered by a botched drug deal. The future star, who worked for an escort service and served as a drug mule, was delivering a $24,000 kilo of cocaine when she was robbed by thugs, FBI documents reveal.

Thinking the buyer was in on the heist, she and her partner, Colombian cartel associate Daniel Aguilar, plotted to kidnap him and extort money from his father.

But they got busted. Danielle testified against Aguilar and got five years probation for extortion.

BIG APPLE SONJA WAS REALLY SAUCED

"REAL Housewives of New York" socialite Sonja Morgan got hit – hard - by the reality TV curse with a 2010 Memorial Day drunk-driving bust. During her first season on the Bravo show, Morgan was stopped in the wee hours of May 31 after blowing through a stop sign in the trendy Hamptons.

After failing field sobriety tests and refusing to take a Breathalyzer, she was taken to jail. Morgan, now 51, pleaded not guilty to misdemeanor driving while intoxicated and denied several traffic violations, too. When asked about her legal problems, she said: "I can't talk about it."

NENE'S BIG NO-NOS

NOW one of the highest paid stars on "Real Housewives of Atlanta," earning over $1 million a year, high-handed and haughty NeNe Leakes is just plain old Linnethia Johnson in police files – and she has a rap sheet was long as her arm!

Officially, she admits to a shoplifting bust when she was in her early 20s – and even wrote about it in her 2009 autobiography. But she was less than forthcoming

In 1992, then-25-year-old NeNe was arrested and charged with three felony counts and one misdemeanor charge for stealing from the phone company. After pleading guilty to all four counts, the "RHOA" and "Dancing with the Stars" diva was arrested again - three times

"RHOA" fans find her busy criminal past both ironic and hypocritical since the housewife is well known for slamming cast mate Marlo Hampton for her former illegal actions. Guess it takes one to know one!

FRAUDSTER Apollo doin' Eight Years

MUG SHOT

APOLLO Nida, the now-estranged husband of "The Real Housewives of Atlanta" star Phaedra Parks, is serving eight years in a Lexington, Ky., prison after confessing to federal bank fraud and identity theft.

The personal trainer faced 30 years in the joint for his role in a massive financial scandal, but spilled his guts to investigators in return for a lighter sentence and paying $2 million in restitution.

Nida, 36, is no stranger to runins with the law. Before marrying Parks in 2009, the convict served five years of an 18-year sentence for racketeering. He also did about five months in the late 1990s for receiving stolen goods. Now, Parks, the mother of his sons, Ayden, 4, and Dylan, 1, says she'll divorce the crook.

Good ol' boy Steven Ray Tickle was collared in 2013. He keeps jugs of white lightning

PORSHA BUSTED FOR SPEEDING

"RHOA" princess Porsha Williams' life in the fast lane came to a screeching halt Dec. 29, 2014, when she was popped for speeding and jailed for driving with a suspended license.

Cops say the 33-year-old ex-wife of former NFL quarterback Kordell Stewart was blazing down an Atlanta highway at 78 mphin a 55 mph zone when she was pulled over.

Porsha claims she was heading to visit her cancer-stricken grandfather in the hospital and apologized if she put others at risk by her actions. She was released on $1,726 bond.

The arrest was the Bravo star's second of the year. In April, she was charged with misdemeanor battery after fighting her "Housewives'" co-star Kenya Moore during the show's reunion episode. She posted $2,000 bail and the charges have evaporated.

YOU'D think "Moonshiners" star Steven Ray Tickle could hold his alcohol considering his occupation.

But that proved untrue in March 2013 when cops literally CARRIED him into jail after he was busted for public intoxication.

The then-35-year-old Discovery Channel bootlegger was found drinking by himself in the parking lot of a Danville, Va., convenience store.

Cops say there was a strong stench of alcohol, and Tickle exhibited "normal indications of being intoxicated." Lawmen gave Tickle the option of hitching a ride, but hauled him into jail when he failed to find someone to pick him up. He was released from jail later that day.

FALLEN IDOL SIERRA: VIOLENCE AND DRUGS

"AMERICAN Idol" contestant Jessica Sierra sang for presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush when she was a teen. But she was then sentenced to a year in rehab following a second arrest at a Tampa, Fla., nightclub. The singer pleaded no contest in court.

In December 2007, Sierra was thrown out of the Full Moon Saloon for intoxication. After her ejection from the bar, Sierra was described as belligerent with patrons on the street and combative with police as they attempted to cuff her. According to police reports, the then-22-year-old threw up in the cop car, taunted officers with racial slurs, and finally offered sexual favors in exchange for her release.

Less than six months earlier, the "AI" alum was arrested at another Tampa bar after she threw a glass at a fellow customer. During that booking, officers found cocaine in her purse, and she was later charged with possession. Prior to copping a plea, Sierra appeared on another reality show, "Celebrity Rehab," with Dr. Drew Pinsky.

'THE SITUATION' TAKES A BEATING

BRUISE BROTHER

10 STARS BEHIND BARS • GLOBE

"JERSEY Shore" party animal Mike "The Situation" Sorrentino is facing up to 11 years as Uncle Sam's guest — and $600,000 in fines — after being arrested and charged with failing to pay federal income tax on $9 million from public appearances and business deals made since leaving the show. The Situation and his brother Marc, are currently free on $250,000 bail and slated for trial in March. When asked if he was innocent following a court proceeding, The Situation smiled and said: "Of course."

But he has a history of getting into trouble with his brothers. Last June, he and his brother Frank were involved in a brawl at his family's Boca Tanning Salon in Middletown, N.J. As part of a plea deal accepted by the judge, The Situation agreed to take anger management classes, which if successfully completed, may allow the assault charges against him to be downgraded.

SOUSED SNOOKI SLAPPED IN CUFFS

NAUGHTY Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi was taken into custody by the Seaside Heights, N.J., police department for disturbing the peace after a 2010 "Jersey Shore" episode featuring the party-hearty-lifestyle, 20-somethings sharing a rented beach house.

The pint-size spitfire eventually pleaded guilty to one count of "interfering with the quiet enjoyment of the beach," while two other charges of disorderly conduct and criminal annoyance were dropped. She was fined $500 by the judge – who called her a Lindsay Lohan wannabe – and sentenced to two days of community service.

Snooki's first full day of service was spent cleaning up at Popcorn Park Zoo, a facility for abused and abandoned animals. On day two, she vacuumed the floors of the police department and filed papers before changing clothes and signing autographs at a fundraiser.

In 2004, then 16-yearold Snooki was charged with selling alcohol to a minor, Michael Truncali, who died in a car crash after leaving a party in her basement. These days, Snooki has slowed down – and become a devoted mom!

possession charges. She was freed after less than two years.

'WIFE SWAP' SIREN BUSTED AS HOOKER

BLONDE bombshell and former teen pageant queen Alicia Guastaferro was just 16 when she starred on a "Wife Swap" episode that featured her proud pop giving her a racy spray tan. Then four years later, Daddy's Little Girl was busted for prostitution after being found drunk at a highway rest stop with a passedout man old enough to be her father.

She was also charged with possession of a controlled substance, criminal possession and criminal impersonation

- since police say she sported a fake ID.

At first, Alicia admitted the guy paid her about $700 for sex, police say. But the man denied her charge – and Guastaferro later retracted her statement.

As a result, Genesee County, N.Y., prosecutors decided to drop the prostitution charges in 2012. But Guastaferro still faces a charge of misdemeanor drug possession and is awaiting her day in court.

TAXMAN TAMES 'SURVIVOR' WISEGUY

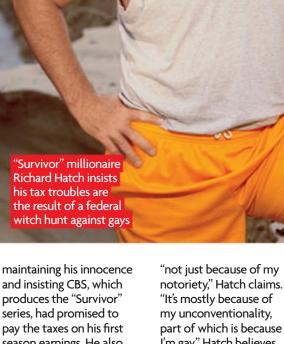

CRAFTY and cunning Richard Hatch, who raised eyebrows with his naked romps while winning the first edition of "Survivor" in 2000, is now the poster boy for reality TV stars gone wild - and a two-time jailbird!

After spending more than three years in a federal pen for failing to pay income tax on his $1 million "Survivor" prize, Hatch was put behind bars in 2011 to serve ANOTHER nine-month sentence as a tax cheat.

Federal prosecutors say the reality star, who also appeared on Donald Trump's "Celebrity Apprentice," welched on the deal that turned him loose in 2009. Following his release from prison, Hatch was due to serve three years of supervised release at his sister's Rhode Island home.

As part of the agreement, the former professional sperm donor, car salesman and bartender was supposed to refile his 2000 and 2001 tax forms and pay Uncle Sam what he owed. But once out on the street, he changed his tune - and insisting CBS, which produces the "Survivor" series, had promised to pay the taxes on his first season earnings. He also contends the American justice system is flawed and he was deliberately targeted by lawmen.

His legal issues are notoriety," Hatch claims. part of which is because I'm gay." Hatch believes gays, women and African Americans are unfairly targeted and "bullied" by a broken justice system that is determined to destroy him.

SURVIVOR' SKUPIN'S REALLY ROCKY ROAD

THIS former contestant on two "Survivor" shows was arrested for three traffic violations after cops say they witnessed his Ford SUV swerving across the center line in Hillsdale County, Mich.

In 2013, Mike Skupin was charged with driving with a suspended license, possessing an improper license plate, and not having proof of insurance.

The 52-year-old cast member has a long history of license suspensions and traffic violations – at least 20 since 1999, according to public records.

Skupin was brought to the Hillsdale County Jail and given a $4,000 bond. The father of seven posted bail several hours later and was released.

Skupin made headlines in 2001 as the first "Survivor" contestant to ever be medically evacuated from the show after he passed out and fell into a fire. His wounds were too severe to be treated locally. He returned to the game in 2012 for Season 25, "Survivor: Philippines."

"DEADLIEST Catch" crew member Joshua Tel Warner survived crab fishing on the dangerous Bering Sea – but the reality TV gig unmasked his secret life of crime! Warner was sentenced to nine years in prison for his part in three bank heists in Eugene, Ore. The first bank job occurred before the deckhand appeared on the Discovery channel hit. Two more were committed after his stint on the show, which attracts 5.5 million viewers per episode.

Not surprisingly, Warner's appearance on "Deadliest Catch" led to his arrest. Viewers recognized him as a suspect and called the cops.

"I watched the show, too," said Eugene police detective Jeff Donaca. "I don't think you can end up on national TV, make a spectacle of yourself, and not end up getting caught for three bank robberies."

The former fisherman was arrested during a traffic stop in Illinois and returned to Oregon. He pleaded guilty to all three crimes in exchange for a reduced sentence.

KINKY 'TOP CHEF' GETS 'JUST DESSERTS'

"TOP Chef: Just Desserts" finalist Morgan Wilson – who has been described as both polarizing and homophobic – was indicted on three felony counts of possession with intent to promote and distribute child pornography.

Police arrested Wilson, who often spoke fondly on the show about his own young son, in December 2010, in his hometown of Plano, Texas, one month after the show's season finale aired.

According to court records, the pastry chef had numerous images and videos on his computer of children, some as young as toddlers, engaged in sexual acts. Investigators said he also offered the porn to others through a file-sharing service known as Limewire. Wilson, who police say has admitted to the charges, faces up to 10 years in prison if convicted.

The "Top Chef" was released after posting a $10,000 bond and promising not to access any computer that lacks monitoring software.

McDaniel was sentenced to 10 years in prison for pedophilia. June was supposed to fork over $100 a month to help out with her offspring's expenses.

In 2008, June was arrested for stealing $3,300 from a Georgia McDonald's that she managed.

Those charges were dropped but by 2009 she

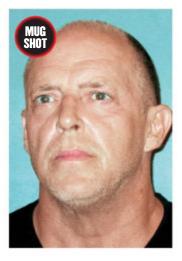

Those charges were dropped but by 2009, she was more than $4,000 behind in child support payments, and court documents refer to her "willful and continuous refusal to comply." June was threatened with jail time, but just 12 weeks later, all charges were dismissed.

Scandal erupted in 2014 when it was revealed that June had rekindled a relationship with McDaniel following his prison release, even though Chickadee insists McDaniel molested her. After months of denials, Mama June finally admitted she'd had contact with the convicted child molester. As a result, TLC canceled "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo" last year.

'GUN' HOT SHOT Branded Pervert

DISGRACED "Sons of Guns" star Will Hayden faces life in prison – accused of raping two preteen girls, including his own daughter, in heinous incidents more than two decades apart!

The 49-year-old gunsmith from Greenwell Springs, La., was put in the cops' crosshairs in August 2014, when he was accused of molesting a 12-year-old girl between March 2013 and August 2014.

Discovery Channel axed the show based on his life as a weapons experter.

Then another woman came forward to claim Hayden raped her 22 years earlier when she was a 12-year-old. Meanwhile, Hayden's eldest daughter and show co-star Stephanie Hayden Ford told TV's Dr. Phil McGraw her father touched her inappropriately in the 1990s when she was 12 years old.

Hayden is charged with three counts of aggravated rape and one count of forcible rape. He has pleaded not guilty to all charges.

'RUNWAY' STAR'S CRAZY CATFIGHT

ME-OUCH! "Project Runway" finalist Kenley Collins ambushed her former fiance, musician Zak Penley as he slept in their Brooklyn home – using their pet cat, apples and a laptop computer as weapons, cops charge.

And when dazed Penley tried to crawl away, police say hot-tempered Collins slammed the bedroom door on his head and doused him with water.

But the Season 5 third-place finisher, who'd called off the wedding days before the the March 17, 2009, incident, insists the whole thing was blown out of proportion.

"What I really said was 'Here! Feed your cat,' and handed it to him," the then-26-year-old designer said after her arrest. "It was all just really ridiculous."

After initially facing a second-degree felony assault charge, the pretty brunette pleaded guilty to a count of disorderly conduct, paid a $120 fine and was forbidden from contacting Penley for two years.

'REAL WORLD'S' PUCK RUNS OUT OF LUCK!

DAVID "Puck" Rainey keeps earning his bad-boy reputation.

As one of the most notorious houseguests in the MTV reality show's history, Rainey, now 46, was evicted for harassing an AIDS-stricken gay roommate during the third season, set in San Francisco. He hasn't fared much better of late.

Since 2003, the notorious boozer has had multiple domestic violence arrests, a battery and DUI. In 2012, he began serving a minimum twoyear term in California's Wasco State Prison after pleading no contest to stalking a woman.

FROM 'BIG BROTHER' TO THE BIG HOUSE

ADAM Jasinski, the winner of the ninth season of the reality show "Big Brother," was sentenced to four years in federal prison following his conviction for tax evasion and drug trafficking.

In 2009, Jasinski was arrested after he tried to sell 2,000 oxycodone pills to a witness working with the Drug Enforcement Administration in Boston. Following his arrest, the "Big Brother" winner allegedly told DEA agents that he used his $500,000 prize money to fund his drug deals and that he'd been "obtaining thousands of pills" that he sold to customers up and down the East Coast.

Following a 2-month stint in jail, Jasinski was released on a $200,000 bond secured by his parents' home and properties. He checked into a Massachusetts substance abuse center, where he spent four months before moving to an outpatient facility in New Jersey.

Jasinski was facing up to 14 years in prison. His lawyers tried to get him off with time served, but the judge wasn't buying that. "You were drug trafficking until they caught you," said Judge William Young. "You got to a position where you thought that the rules didn't apply to you."

PARIS HILTON PRISON DIVA

"SIMPLE Life" jailbird Paris Hilton pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor charges stemming from a September 2010 arrest for cocaine possession and obstructing a Las Vegas cop. In return, the airhead heiress got off with a relative slap on the wrist.

Put on probation, Paris paid a $2,000 fine and performed 228 hours of community service – eight more than ordered – for having about a small amount of cocaine stashed in her purse. The charges stemmed from when she and then-beau Cy Waits were pulled over in Sin City after lawmen smelled marijuana wafting from their pimped-out Cadillac. Amazingly, it wasn't the first time the blonde got in trouble – or the first time she nearly skated.

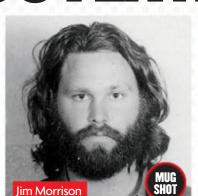

In 2007, Paris spent just four days of a 45-day sentence behind bars after being nailed for a probation violation. She was caught driving on a suspended license following a no-contest plea to alcohol-related reckless driving. At the time she made the plea, the reality diva said she'd "learned a great deal from this ordeal." Probably that celebs sometimes get special treatment.

CELEB KILLERS FACE JUSTICE FOR THEIR CRIMES

EBS

KINKY MUSIC MOGUL PHIL SPECTOR BLEW AWAY ACTRESS LANA CLARKSON

IT took two trials to get it right, but musical murderer Phil Spector has gone from creating the famed 1960s "wall of sound" to the four walls of a California prison!

Multi-millionaire Spector is now doing time for the kinky killing of B-movie actress Lana Clarkson.
As part of a twisted sex game, the gun-nut shot the beauty – through the roof of her mouth – as she sat in a chair at his Alhambra, Calif., mansion!

Of course, the music legend tells a different story about what happened the night of Feb. 3, 2003. He insists the blonde star of the cult flick "Barbarian"

CELEB SLAUGHTERHOUSE

Queen" came to his house and committed suicide.

And his defense team clouded the issue enough for his first trial to end with a hung jury.

But the second trial resulted in the rock and roll royal being convicted for second-degree murder.

The testimony of Spector's driver, Adriano De Souza, helped nail the wig-wearing freak.

The chauffeur testified he heard a gunshot, saw Spector come out of his castle-like mansion with a gun and heard him say: "I think I killed somebody."

Earlier that night, De Souza took Spector on a Hollywood pub crawl that ended at the House of Blues. That's where he met Clarkson, 40, who was working as a hostess in the V.I.P. room. After a few drinks, Spector invited her back to his home. A short time later, she was dead.

The defense's case fell apart when it was revealed Spector had menaced other women with handguns as part of his sick style of foreplay.

Experts also testified people don't spontaneously kill themselves, especially in a stranger's house. Spector, now 75, was sentenced to serve a maximum of 19 years.

'PRISON BREAK' KILLER CAGED!

"PRISON Break" star Lane Garrison was put behind bars in real life after killing a teenager with his car.

In 2006, the actor was driving his Land Rover SUV with a 17-year-old male in the passenger seat and two 15-year-old girls in the back.

Lane said he met the teens at a grocery store and had accepted their invitation to a party. The actor, who had been drinking, lost control of the car and crashed into a tree, killing the 17-year-old.

the 17-year-old.

Lane was charged with vehicular

manslaughter, driving under the influence, and providing alcohol to a minor. Lane had a blood alcohol level of 0.15.

He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years in jail. He was released in 2009 for good behavior – the same year "Prison Break" was canceled.

The actor, now 34, has also had run-ins with the law over domestic battery charges made by an ex-girlfriend.

SINCE leaving "Melrose Place" in 1992, actress Amy Locane has had several addresses – the latest is New Jersey's Edna Mahan Correctional Facility where she's serving a three-year sentence for vehicular homicide and three years for assault by auto.

Locane's perfect Hollywood fairy tale was turned upside down in 2010 when she crashed her SUV into a Mercury driven by a couple who were turning into their driveway in suburban Montgomery Township, N.J.

The blonde beauty, who starred opposite

Johnny Depp in "Cry-Baby," was going 53 mph in a 35-mph zone. Helene Seeman was killed in the crash and her husband Fred was severely injured.

After the wreck, cops found Locane in a ditch – giggling to herself. Her blood alcohol level was three times the legal limit.

At the time, Locane had left Hollywood to be with her husband, liquor store owner Mark Bovenizer, and their two kids. Now the 43-year-old actress may soon have yet another address. She's eligible for parole in June and expected to return to her Garden State home.

CELEB SLAUGHTERHOUSE

PARDON FREED KILLER DON KING

MUG SHOT

WILD-HAIRED boxing promoter, Don King put two men down for the count – permanently!

In 1954, King was managing an illegal gambling den in Cleveland when he fatally shot Hillary Brown – in the back. King said it was self-defense because his victim was robbing the joint. He was convicted of justifiable homicide.

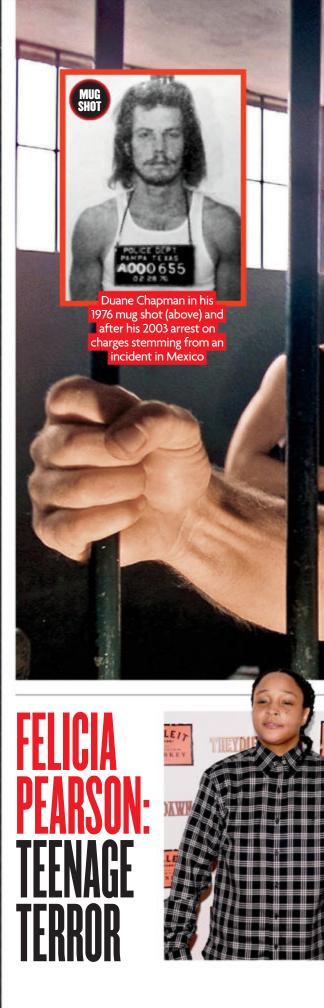

Then just 12 years later, King beat a former employee to death, and once again, the future boxing big shot insisted HE was the victim.

King claimed the guy stole $600 – so when he caught up to him outside a Cleveland bar, he blew a fuse. King brutally pistol-whipped the man and kicked him in the head repeatedly.

He was charged with second-degree murder but that was reduced to manslaughter. King was pardoned by Ohio's governor after serving almost four years in prison.

King, now 83, would go on to produce epic heavyweight championship bouts including Muhammad Ali's "Thrilla in Manila" against Smokin' Joe Frazier.

FELICIA "Snoop" Pearson wasn't acting when she played a coldblooded killer on HBO's crime drama "The Wire."

At age 14, the future TV star gunned down another kid, was convicted for second-degree murder and sent away for five years.

Born a crack-addicted preemie, Pearson bounced around foster care, dropped out of school and started dealing drugs in Baltimore streets when she was 12.

In 1995, the street-savvy wild child argued with 15-year-old Kia Toomer, drew a gun and blew her rival away. Ironically, the slaying changed Felicia's life.

While in prison, Pearson earned her G.E.D. and things started to look up. After her release, she bumped into actor Michael K. Williams at a bar in 2004. Williams, who played Omar on the series, convinced Pearson, now 34, to try out for a role. She got the part and has since founded a program to help troubled kids.

However, in 2011, Pearson pleaded guilty to drug charges and received a suspended jail sentence and probation.

CELEB SLAUGHTERHOUSE

'ANARCHY' CREEP CHOKED LANDLADY & BUTCHERED CAT!

THIS goes beyond anarchy – even for one of Katy Perry's former flames!

"Sons of Anarchy" actor Johnny Lewis strangled his 81-year-old landlady and cut up her cat before jumping off a roof to his death.

Lewis, 28, who played a biker wannabe with one testicle on the TV crime drama, had been spiraling out of control since he was dumped by "I Kissed a Girl" singer, Perry.

In September 2012, he went on a rampage, busting into landlady

Catherine Davis' apartment and breaking up her furniture.

After murdering her and killing her cat, Lewis bolted from the apartment where he was confronted by a handyman who chased him off with a paint roller.

Lewis climbed to the roof and plunged to his death.

Cops suspect the actor may have been high on the synthetic drug called Smiles when he went on his bloody spree.

TY COP MICHAEL JACE JAILED AS WIFE KILLER

TV cop Michael Jace has found himself on the wrong side of the law after being charged with shooting his wife, April, to death last spring in their Los Angeles home.

Jace, who played New York City policeman Julien Lowe on FX's crime drama "The Shield," has pleaded not guilty to the slaying. He's being held in lieu of $2 million bail while awaiting trial.

Meanwhile, the star's father-in-law insists Jace confessed to the May 19 crime during a phone conversation that took place just minutes after

DEADLY DUTTON LEARNED LESSON

KILLING a man and going to prison gave Charles Dutton a brand new life — as an actor.

A middle-school dropout, Dutton was 17 when he took a guy's life during a vicious brawl and got sent to the slammer for seven years.

But soon he was back in the Big House serving three years for having a handgun. The bad guy got sent to solitary, where he began reading plays to pass the time. When he returned to the general prison population, Dutton started a drama group.

After leaving prison, Dutton got his G.E.D. and eventually earned a master's degree at the Yale School of Drama. In 1984, he debuted on Broadway. In 1993 he co-starred in the hit movies "Rudy" and "Alien 3."

MOTLEY VINCE SHOWS NO REMORSE

EVEN after killing a friend while driving drunk in 1984, heavy-metal hell-raiser Vince Neil didn't learn his lesson!

Vince was nailed for DUI vehicular manslaughter after the death of his pal, Hanoi Rocks drummer Nicholas "Razzle" Dingley, who perished while they were racing from a Redondo Beach, Calif., liquor store!

The Motley Crue legend was so blotto he drove his sports car head-on into another vehicle carrying two people, who were badly injured. The rocker spent only 19 days in jail and wrote a $2.6 million check to his victims' families.

He wrote another check in 2002 after a conviction related to a nightclub brawl.

Just a year later, he was given a 30-day suspended sentence for throwing a hooker against a wall at a legal brothel in Nevada.

In 2007, he pleaded no contest to reckless driving as part of a deal with Las Vegas prosecutors to drop a DUI charge. But three years later, he was arrested for drunk driving in Sin City.

This time, he pleaded guilty and served 10 days in the slammer. And in 2011, he took a disorderly conduct plea to avoid facing a domestic battery charge in a Vegas court.

REBECCA GAYHEART'S NEVER-ENDING SHAME

"BEVERLY Hills, 90210" actress Rebecca Gayheart was shattered when she hit a 9-year-old boy with her Jeep and killed him.

She even paid the boy's hospital and funeral expenses. But the fact remains her impatience caused little Jorge Cruz Jr.'s death.

In 2001, the innocent kid was crossing a Hollywood street in the middle of the block. Other cars stopped to let the boy cross, but Gayheart, who didn't see the child, couldn't wait for traffic to clear. She pulled around the vehicles crushing the youngster with her car. Rebecca, now 43 and a mother of two young girls, pleaded no contest to vehicular manslaughter. She escaped jail with three years probation and 750 hours of community service. She also paid a $2,800 fine and agreed to make a public service announcement on traffic safety.

"It was the worst thing that could ever have happened to her, killing a child," her lawyer Harlan Braun said. "She feels terrible."

'SOPRANOS' STAR LINKED TO COP'S SLAYING

"SOPRANOS" gangster Lillo Brancato landed his role on the hit HBO series because he looked like an authentic mobster.

Unfortunately, he started hanging out with real-life wise guys and it landed him in prison.

He did eight years for his part in a burglary that resulted in the killing of a New York City police officer.

Cops say Brancato and mobster Steven Armento were boozing it up in a strip club when the men decided they'd burglarize a house and steal Valium.

Off-duty cop Daniel Enchautegui heard the twosome breaking into the place and tried to stop them.

Armento shot the officer, who returned fire hitting both bad guys. When backup arrived, the two were arrested – and Enchautegui died.

Although Brancato shared responsibility for the murder, he was only put away for attempted burglary. Armento went to prison for killing the cop.

These days, Brancato, 38, is a motivational speaker warning kids about the dangers of drug use.

CLAUDINE LONGET GOT OFF EASY!

SEXY French singer Claudine Longet is a true femme fatale.

She shot her lover, Olympic skier Spider Sabich, to death and stunned the world when she escaped with a slap on the wrist.

Even more shocking was the way former husband Andy Williams stood by her side throughout the trial – even though she divorced the singer.

Sabich was killed March 21, 1976, in his Aspen, Colo., home. Longet said the gun went off while he was showing her how to use it. But evidence showed Sabich was turned away > from Longet at the time he was shot.

Pretty Longet was convicted of misdemeanor criminal negligence. She was fined $250 and sentenced to 30 days in jail, which the judge let her serve on weekends. During the trial, the singer, now 73, started an affair with her married defense attorney who later became her hubby.

CHILD ACTORS GONE BAD

HOME ALONE CULKIN HAS GONE TO POT!

IN 2004, former childhood superstar Macaulay Culkin – best known for his roles in "Uncle Buck" and the "Home Alone" movies – was arrested while riding as a passenger during a routine traffic stop. The driver, 22-year-old Brett Tabisel, allowed a search. Cops in Oklahoma City confiscated 17 grams of marijuana and 24 prescription pills. Culkin admitted to pot possession and possession of a controlled substance without a prescription and was released after posting $4,000 bond. Tabisel was charged with improper lane change, speeding and possession. Culkin pleaded guilty to three misdemeanor crimes and was given a one-year deferred sentence for each. Since then, he was suspected of abusing heroin and chased off stage by angry fans as he performed with his band Pizza Underground.

NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY

'SIXTH SENSE' HALEY TURNED SPACE CASE

HALEY Joel Osment, the little boy who saw dead people in "The Sixth Sense," was lucky to be alive following a 2006 car crash in Los Angeles.

The actor – who suffered only minor injuries – was arrested for DUI and possession of marijuana after flipping his 1995 Saturn. According to authorities, Osment's blood tested at twice the legal limit. The 18-year-old pleaded no contest to the charges and was sentenced to three years' probation, an alcohol-awareness program and paid $1,500 in fines.

DIFF'RENT STRO

TERRIBLE TODD: GUN BUSTS, DRUGS & BOMB THREATS

TODD Bridges' legal troubles began back in 1983 when he was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon. In 1986, he got three years' probation after a no contest plea to charges he made bomb threats. Three years later, Bridges faced his biggest arrest yet when he was charged with the attempted murder of a drug dealer. Two separate trials eventually found the former child star not guilty due to lack of evidence. In 1993, he faced another murder rap after an argument with his roommate David Kitchen, who allegedly attacked Bridges with a sword. The star stabbed Kitchen in the chest with a kitchen knife. It was determined he was acting in self defense and charges were dropped. That same year, he pleaded guilty to illegal possession of drugs and firearms landed in court-ordered rehab.

TRAGIC DANA: ARMED ROBBERY, DOPE & SUICIDE

AFTER being fired from the series in 1989, Dana Plato's life spiraled downward into a series of drug addiction, arrests and eventually death.

In 1991, a broke and desperate Dana robbed a Las Vegas video store with a pellet gun, grabbing $164 before being caught by cops a few moments later. The former star was sentenced to five years' probation, which she later violated by forging a prescription for Valium. A month in jail and court-ordered rehab followed. In 1999, at age 34, Plato died of a drug overdose that was eventually determined to be suicide. Her death followed a stinging stream of insults during a radio interview with Howard Stern the prior day.

BITTER GARY: VIOLENCE & RECKLESS DRIVING

THE runaway star of the series was little Gary Coleman with his popular catchphrase "What'chu talkin' 'bout, Willis?" Well, we're talking about big legal troubles for little Arnold, including numerous assault charges. In 1998, he pleaded no contest after he punched a woman who was seeking his autograph. In 2007, he was cited for disorderly conduct following an argument with his future wife, Shannon Price. Price herself was arrested on domestic violence charges after a heated argument with Coleman in 2009, and he was again cited for disorderly conduct.

In 2010, the diminutive star settled a personal-injury suit stemming from an incident in which he and Price were accused of assaulting a fan and trying to run him over with their truck. His last arrest – related to an outstanding warrant in his 2009 case – happened shortly before his death in 2010 when Price told doctors to pull the plug as he lay in a coma in a Utah hospital. Two days earlier, the actor fell in his home causing fatal brain injuries.

BUSTED 'BUD' BUNDY AD NEAL

CUTS REHAB DEAL

DAVID Faustino, who brought Bud Bundy to a lackluster life for 11 seasons on the dysfunctional family sitcom "Married...with Children," was busted for pot possession and disorderly intoxication in 2007. Police witnessed him trying to climb out of the window of his soon-to-be ex-wife's car during an argument in the middle of an intersection in New Smyrna Beach, Fla.

When confronted by cops, the actor tried to walk away. After smelling alcohol on his breath, police frisked Faustino and found a plastic bag with a gram of pot in his pocket. Two weeks later, the disorderly conduct charges were dropped by the state attorney's office. Months later, the misdemeanor marijuana charge was also dismissed after he completed a drug treatment program.

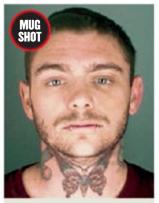

ORLANDO IS STARK 'RAVEN' MAD

IN his latest legal troubles, "That's So Raven" star
Orlando Brown was back in court facing charges of disturbing the peace and public intoxication.
A third charge for allegedly threatening to kill a woman and her 3-year-old daughter was eventually dropped.

Brown's legal woes go way back. In 2007, he was arrested for pot possession. Four years later, he faced DUI charges, followed by two more arrests for failing to finish the terms of his probation. He was busted again for DUI in 2013 and was eventually sentenced to 180 days behind bars. Because of overcrowded conditions in L.A. jails, the actor was released early.

'FAMILY TIES' ANDY IS PURE PUNK

BEST known for his role as Michael J. Fox's adorable little brother Andy on the hit show "Family Ties," Brian Bonsall grew up to find himself in big trouble with the law.

In 2007, the former child star-turned-piercedpunk rocker was sentenced to two years' probation for assaulting his girlfriend after she accused him of pouring a drink on her face as she slept. then placing her in a chokehold. Two years later, Bonsall found himself back in court — this time for hitting his best friend in the face with a bar stool! And in 2010, he was arrested — again — after authorities in his hometown of Boulder, Colo., found pot in his system, a direct violation of his probation.

'GROWING PAINS' Drunk Behind The Wheel

TRACEY Gold, who played sweet Carol Seaver on the '80s sitcom "Growing Pains," was arrested for drunk driving in 2004 after she lost control of her GMC Yukon on a California highway. The vehicle flipped, injuring Tracey's 7-year-old son Sage and hubby Roby.

Gold spent five hours behind bars before being released on $50,000 bail. In 2005, she pleaded guilty to felony DUI, which was reduced to a misdemeanor by the judge. She was given three years probation plus 30 days jail-supervised work release and 240 hours of community service.

DEE JAY DANIELS BEAT MURDER RAP

DEE Jay Daniels, who starred as little smartaleck Michael on the 1990s sitcom "The Hughleys," was charged with premeditated murder stemming from a 2011 incident that left a 26-year-old man dead outside a Stockton, Calif., nightclub. Cops said a vicious feud between the Crips and Bloods street gangs provoked the killing. Dee Jay, real name is Dorian Daniels, was linked to the Bloods. The slay victim was said to be a Crip. The actor was locked up in San Joaquin County Jail pending his trial. He was facing a potential life sentence for the slaying - but was acquitted in 2012 and released from prison.

COPS TERMINATE EDDIE'S CAREER!

ACTOR Edward Furlong of "Terminator 2" fame has a long list of legal troubles including assaulting his exwife in 2009 and violating the restraining order she filed in 2011. Furlong was arrested again in 2012 and charged with domestic violence after he got in a heated argument with a girlfriend at the Los Angeles airport. In 2013, he was taken into custody for a third domestic violence charge, this time against girlfriend Monica Keena. Later that year, the star was booked - once again – for allegedly violating the protective order she filed against him. During this arrest, he tried to hide from cops, but they quickly caught up to him and held him on a $100,000 bond. Furlong was able to stay out of jail after he agreed to enter rehab for his drug addiction and undergo a year of counseling to deal with the domestic violence. Hasta la vista, baby!

STICKY FINGERS

MUG SHOT WING OF CROOKS! EX-CNN talk host Larry King

EX-CNN talk host Larry King couldn't talk his way out of a grand larceny charge after a former business partner said King ripped him off for five grand!

Convicted stock swindler Lou Wolfson accused King of taking money that he was supposed to give to New Orleans politicians.

King was a rising Miami radio and TV host when he was arrested in 1971. The scandal got him fired from all of his jobs, including announcer for the Miami Dolphins.

The charges were dropped in 1972 because the statute of limitations had run out. It took years for King, now 81, to get his radio job back and rise to the top at CNN.

WINONA RYDER SHOPLIFT SHOCK

FANS of "Beetlejuice" beauty Winona Ryder were stunned to learn the woman who has it all – shoplifted a bunch more. Winona was busted at Saks Fifth Avenue in 2001 for snatching nearly $5,000 of fashionable outfits and hair care products. She was also charged with possession of narcotics.

. The star of "Edward Scissorhands" told an interviewer she developed sticky fingers because of stress and anxiety attacks.

She was convicted of shoplifting, but avoided jail in exchange for 480 hours of community service, and $10,000 in fines and restitution. The 43-year-old was also ordered into drug counseling.

RANDY QUAID & WIFE: ODDBALL FUGITIVES

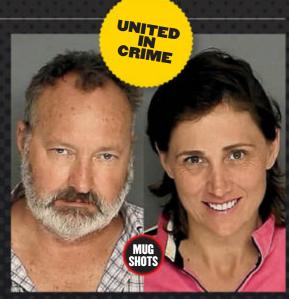

RANDY and Evi Quaid have a habit of skipping out on hotel bills, court appearances and blowing town when warrants are issued for their arrest.

Their wacky life on the lam began in 2009 when they stiffed a hotel for a $10,000 bill. They fled to Texas where they were later arrested. Evi pleaded no contest to defrauding an innkeeper.

In 2010 they were back in court for squatting in a California house they used to own. They were charged with burglary and were released on $50,000 bond each.

In October, 2010, Randy, now 64, and his wife, now 51, sought asylum from American prosecutors in Canada where Evi is a citizen.

BLAME it on stupid Cupid. That's how "Lost" actress Bai Ling explained her arrest the day before Feb. 14, 2008, on charges of shoplifting $16 in magazines and batteries at LAX.

She told a reporter she'd broken up with her boyfriend before Valentine's Day and her emotions were going crazy. Later that day, she wrote on her blog: "Life is a sad song sometimes, but still sings the beauty for their loved ones."

At least the hopeless romantic, 48, didn't spend the holiday in the pokey. She paid a $700 fine and pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace, a misdemeanor.

SOMERS

"THREE'S Company" star Suzanne Somers had a good reason for writing bad checks in 1968.

The young mom needed to buy food for her hungry child and expected the modeling fee to come in time to cover the amount.

San Francisco police arrested the 19-year-old and charged her with fraud for passing $100 in rubber checks. Charges were dropped after she paid back the money.

"My husband had abandoned me, I wasn't working, had no money and my son had been in a car accident and spent three months in a hospital," she said.

BEST ACTING

"GODFATHER" star Al Pacino was playing a crime boss years before he landed the role of Michael Corleone.

In 1961, Pacino and two friends were pulled over by Rhode Island cops for acting suspiciously. The trio were wearing black masks and gloves and had a loaded handgun.

They were charged with carrying a concealed weapon and suspicion of burglary. Pacino spent three days in jail. Charges were later dropped when Pacino, now 74, explained they were actors on their way to a performance when they were stopped.

'ROSE GARDEN' SINGER'S THORNY PROBLEMS

SINGER Lynn Anderson was arrested for lifting a "Harry Potter" DVD in Taos, New Mexico. Lynn, who had a hit with the song "Rose Garden" in 1970, was also charged with resisting arrest and punching a police officer.

It wasn't her first run-in with the law. In 2004, she was busted for DUI. The 2005 shoplifting charge was dropped as long as Lynn stayed out of trouble. In 2006 and 2014, the 67-year-old was arrested and charged with DUI.

GLOBE - STARS BEHIND BARS 39

TRAIN WRECK!

LINDSAY Lohan went from Disney sensation to bona fide "Mean Girl" jailbird in the space of a few turbulent years.

Already a star at age of 12 when she made her motion picture debut in "The Parent Trap," the blonde cutie seemed to be making the difficult Hollywood transition into adulthood with the success of films like "Freaky Friday."

But the cracks in her psyche and a dysfunctional childhood – linked to her parents Michael and Dina's ugly split, reunion and final bitter divorce – began to show as her 21st birthday approached.

IN MAY 2007, she was arrested for DUI and possession of cocaine after crashing her Mercedes in Beverly Hills. Two months later – after turning 21 – she was in trouble with the law again – this time for another DUI, driving on a suspended license and cocaine possession.

On Aug. 23, 2007, she was sentenced to one day behind bars, 10 days community service and three years probation after

Lindsay is cuffed (above) during a 2011 court appearance. The actress cries in court in 2010 (right) when the judge orders her to jail for violating her probation for a 2007 DUI, in which she crashed her Mercedes into a tree (below) in California after just 84 minutes on Nov. 15 because of overcrowding. Sadly, problems didn't end there. In May 2010, her probation was revoked and a warrant was issued for her arrest after she skipped a court date – so she could attend the Cannes Film Festival. Four days later, the fallen party girl was fitted with an alcohol-monitoring ankle bracelet and ordered to undergo weekly drug and alcohol testing as conditions of her bail.

After failing to attend her court-ordered alcohol education classes, she was sentenced to 90 days in the slammer on July 6, 2010. She ended up serving two weeks.

The following year didn't get any better when Lindsay was accused of stealing a necklace. She was caged for another 120 days for violating her 2007 DUI probation.

In October 2011, her probation was again revoked and she posted $100,000 bail to get out of the lock-up.

Since then, Lindsay has been in hot water for leaving the scene of an accident, a club brawl and a fight with her mother. But fortunately she's kept out of jail – for now.

MISCHA BARTON: SO-0-0 STUPID

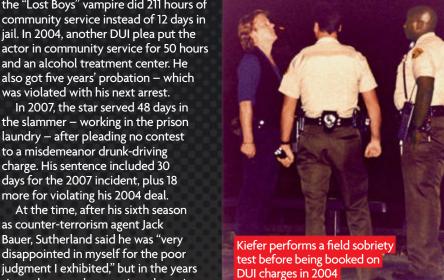

"THE O.C." star Mischa Barton was sentenced to three years, unsupervised probation after pleading no contest to driving drunk – without a license – in 2007. Her California deal also included a $1,700 fine and a mandatory three-month alcohol-awareness class. "I'm really disappointed in myself," the first-time offender told Ryan Seacrest in an interview. "I don't want to do something so stupid again!"

NICOLE RICHIE: Dopey sentence

AFTER being pulled over when her Mercedes SUV was spotted heading down the wrong direction of a California freeway, Nicole Richie admitted to smoking pot and was arrested for driving under the influence of drugs. The reality star later spent 82 minutes of a 96-hour sentence behind bars — a term officials say is typical due to overcrowded jail conditions.

since, the actor has continued to raise eyebrows with his booze-fueled follies.

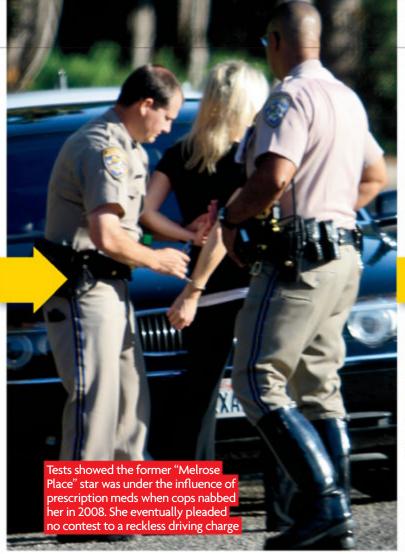

MELROSE' MENACE HEATHER LOCKLEAR CUFFED BY COPS

KHLOE KARDASHIAN: 3 Hours in the pokey!

SPOILED reality star Khloe Kardashian cut a 2007 drunk-driving deal that included enrolling in an alcohol-awareness program. Seemingly contrite Khloe then claimed getting behind the wheel after drinking was "unthinkable," and insisted she'd "never, ever do it again." But Khloe blew off booze education and was sentenced to 30 days in jail. She only served less than three hours!

AFTER a witness called cops to report a woman "driving erratically," California Highway Patrol found the suspect, "Melrose Place" star Heather Locklear, inside a car parked on a highway in Montecito – blocking traffic! She was arrested on suspicion of driving under the influence of a controlled substance.

After tests at the police station, it was determined the blonde bombshell, under treatment for depression and anxiety after busting up with Bon Jovi rocker hubby Richie Sambora, hadn't been drinking that night in September 2008. However, she WAS charged with driving under the influence of prescription medicine and released on her own recognizance hours later.

Eventually, the actress pleaded no contest to reckless driving in return for the DUI charges being dropped. As part of the deal, Heather was fined $700, ordered to complete a road and safety class, and put on three years' probation.

The following year, she ran over a "No Parking" sign in Ventura County, Calif., and fled the scene. Prosecutors later dropped that case citing "insufficient evidence."

KELLY LEBROCK: RED MEANS STOP!

"WOMAN in Red" siren Kelly LeBrock blew a stop sign and got nailed in 2013 for driving "erratically," while driving over the 55 mph speed limit! After a Breathalyzer showed a blood alcohol level twice the legal limit, the actress was booked for DUI in Santa Barbara, Calif. She pleaded no contest and got three years' probation.

CHARLES BARKLEY: SLAM DUNKED!

PULLED over in Scottsdale, Ariz., on Dec. 31, 2008, former Phoenix Suns basketball star Charles Barkley told the officer he was on his way to have sex with a "hot" girl "around the corner." The unimpressed cop gave the TNT commentator a field sobriety test, which he flunked. Barkley later pleaded guilty. He got 5 days in jail and a $2,000 fine.

BAD BOY BIEBER IS SUCH A DRAG!

WHILE drag racing in a rented yellow Lamborghini through a Miami neighborhood last year, underage boozer Justin Bieber was captured by police for driving under the influence.

After leaving SET Nightclub in Miami Beach at 4 a.m., the singer's entourage blocked a busy street with their cars to create a drag strip for Bieber and another celeb, Ferrari-driving rapper Khalil Amir Sharieff.

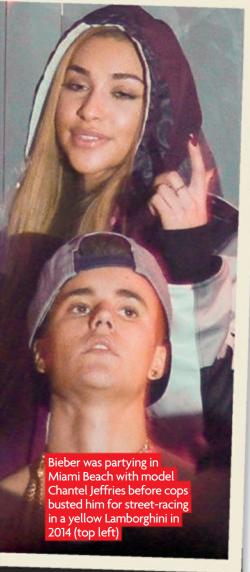

According to police reports, the two teens were speeding in an excess of 55 to 60 mph in a residential zone of 30 mph.

Police Chief Raymond Martinez reports that the Biebs – who failed a field sobriety test – was incoherent at the time of the incident, resisted arrest and was behind the wheel with an expired driver's license. The teen terror spent eight hours in the slammer to dry out – then was freed on $2,500 bail.

Eight months later, in August 2014, Bieber accepted a deal and pleaded guilty to careless driving. Prosecutors dropped the DUI charge after the pop star agreed to make a $50,000 donation to a youth charity. But his legal troubles didn't end. He was arrested for assault in Canada – case dropped – and charged with misdemeanor vandalism in L.A., which resulted in two years' probation.

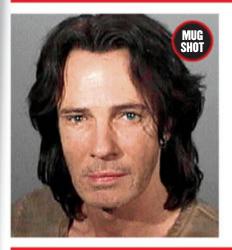

KEANU REEVES: CHIP OFF THE BLOCK

IN 1993, actor Keanu Reeves had his own less-than-excellent adventure when he was collared in L.A. for DUI and fighting with his arresting officer. Reeves was released and has remained out of trouble since. "The Matrix" star said his mug shot reminded him too much of his estranged father, who was doing 10 years on a heroin rap.

SAM SHEPARD: SCHOOL OF HARD KNOCKS

PULITZER prize-winning playwright and actor Sam Shepard pleaded guilty to drunk driving through a Normal, Ill., neighborhood in 2009. The star told the judge he'd never drive under the influence again because "it's not worth it." Part of his plea included 100 hours of community service, an alcohol treatment course, a $600 fine plus court costs and two years' probation.

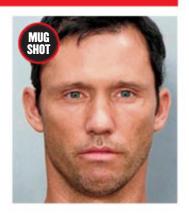

"JESSIE'S Girl" rocker-turned-soap star Rick Springfield said "no contest" to misdemeanor reckless driving with "under-the-influence conditions" in 2011 and got three years' probation. The Grammy Award winner, who also played Dr. Noah Drake on "General Hospital," was dragged to L.A. County Jail in early 2013 after he missed a court appearance related to the case. He was later released.

JEFFREY DONOVAN: LAME EXCUSE

"BURN Notice" star Jeffrey Donovan was singed in 2009 after he almost hit a parked police car. He refused a Breathalyzer and failed a field sobriety test, sparking drunk-driving charges in Miami Beach. His excuse? Taking Benadryl with three glasses of wine earlier that evening. Later, he pleaded to reckless driving to avoid jail for DUI.

STEVE MCQUEEN: NOT SO MAGNIFICENT

KING of Cool Steve McQueen, who starred in classics like "The Great Escape" and "The Magnificent Seven," was arrested for drunk driving in Anchorage, Alaska, in 1972. After posting bond and making peace with police, the notorious bad boy left town. The actor was eventually tried in absentia and convicted on the lesser charge of reckless driving.

SALLY STRUTHERS: LOST HER LICENSE

SALLY Struthers, the Emmy Awardwinning actress who played goofy Gloria on "All in the Family," cut a deal with prosecutors after a 2012 DUI arrest in Maine and pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of driving to endanger. The 67-year-old former spokesperson for the Christian Children's Fund paid $1,200 in fines and legal fees and lost her license for 30 days.

Natasha Lyonne: No star treatment

IN a 2002 deal with Miami prosecutors, "American Pie" cutie Natasha Lyonne pleaded guilty to drunk-driving charges. The previous year, the actress was arrested after she ran her rented car off the road and into a traffic sign. Lyonne reportedly told the arresting officer: "I'm a movie star." It didn't help. She got six months' probation, a fine and community service.

BEFORE his death in 2012, actor and former TV talk-show host Gary Collins was arrested on three separate occasions for drunk driving. His last arrest, in Santa Barbara, Calif., occurred after cops observed him driving his motor home erratically. This 2009 arrest came close on the heels of a no contest plea for another California DUI 13 months earlier. Collins, who was wed to actress Mary Ann Mobley, served four days in jail for that offense and was given four years' probation. A $100,000 arrest warrant was later issued for the former Miss America emcee after he failed to show up for a progress report on his case. While Collins wasn't responsible for causing the three-car crash in which one person died, officers at the scene arrested him for misdemeanor DUI.

NICK CARTER: STREET SMARTS

DRIVING erratically down Main Street got Backstreet Boy Nick Carter nabbed for DUI in Huntington Beach, Calif., back in 2005. A decade later, Carter says the arrest helped him "so much" and made him a better person. "I did the classes and my AA meetings," he says. "Because I did, I will never ever get behind the wheel and drink again."

Samantha Ronson: Speed Demon

CELEBRITY DJ Samantha Ronson, best known as Lindsay Lohan's ex-girlfriend, was flagged in Baker, Calif., while driving home from an August 2011 nightclub gig in Las Vegas. Said officers at the scene: "Speed is why she was stopped, but she was arrested on two counts of misdemeanors of driving under the influence." The charges didn't stick.

CHRIS KLEIN: SECOND CHANCE

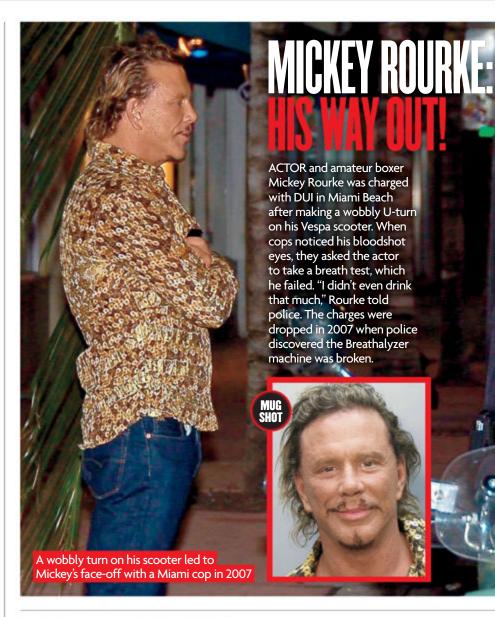

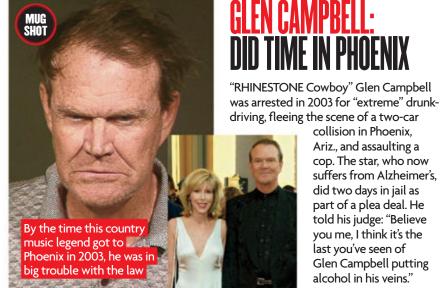

"AMERICAN Pie" hunk Chris Klein said "no contest" to 2010 DUI charges in Van Nuys, Calif., after serving four days in the can and 60 days in rehab. The star, who had a blood alcohol level three times over the limit, thanked the judge for being so understanding - because he had a previous record related to a 2005 drunk driving bust in San Diego!

JENNA JAMESON:

EX-PORN star Jenna Jameson pleaded guilty to DUI after slamming her Range Rover into a light pole in Orange County, Calif.. Placed on three years' informal probation, the adult film legendturned-business mogul agreed to pay a $340 fine, take an alcoholeducation class and participate in a "victim's impact panel" sponsored by Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

collision in Phoenix, Ariz., and assaulting a cop. The star, who now suffers from Alzheimer's, did two days in jail as part of a plea deal. He told his judge: "Believe you me, I think it's the last you've seen of Glen Campbell putting alcohol in his veins."

JAIME PRESSLY: LET'S MAKE A DEAL

WITH a blood alcohol level nearly three times the legal limit, "My Name is Earl" actress Jaime Pressly pleaded no-contest to a lesser charge in a Santa Monica, Calif., court and was sentenced to a three-year informal probation period in 2011. She also had to attend an alcoholawareness class for six months and an ignition lock was installed in her car.

MICHELLE RODRIGUEZ: CAR-AZY BEHIND THE WHEEL

SURPRISE! The "Fast & Furious" street racer Michelle Rodriguez has a slew of car-related, real-life arrests, including drunkdriving incidents.

In 2003, the actress faced eight misdemeanor charges connected to a hit-and-run-incident that was followed by a DUI arrest in Los Angeles four months later. She pleaded no contest to three of the charges and was jailed for 48 hours, followed by community service at two hospital morgues and a three-month alcohol awareness program.

But the 36-year-old star wasn't done. While filming "Lost in Hawaii" in 2005, she was arrested on another DUI charge and pleaded guilty the first day her case went to court. She agreed to a $500 fine and five days in jail instead of the proposed 240 hours of community service.

Because her Hawaii arrest was a violation of her L.A. probation, the actress was sentenced to 60 days behind bars, a one-month rehab program and 30 days community service working for Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

Thanks to overcrowded jails, she spent just one day in lockup. That wasn't enough, apparently, because in 2007, she was busted for violating probation – again – and sentenced to six months in the slammer. She served 17 days of the 180-day sentence before being released – and monitored by an ankle bracelet.

CRIMES OF PASSION

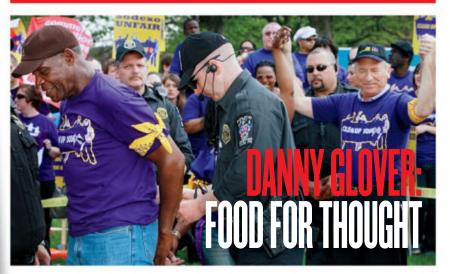

DARYL HANNAH: PAYS THE PIPER

DARYL'S no stranger to making a splash – and she's got the rap sheet to prove it! The "Kill Bill" actress, 54, was arrested multiple times between 2006 and 2013 for participating in environmental protests. Her biggest crusade of late? Speaking out against the TransCanada Keystone XL Pipeline, designed to transport tar-sands crude oil from Canada to refineries along Texas' Gulf Coast.

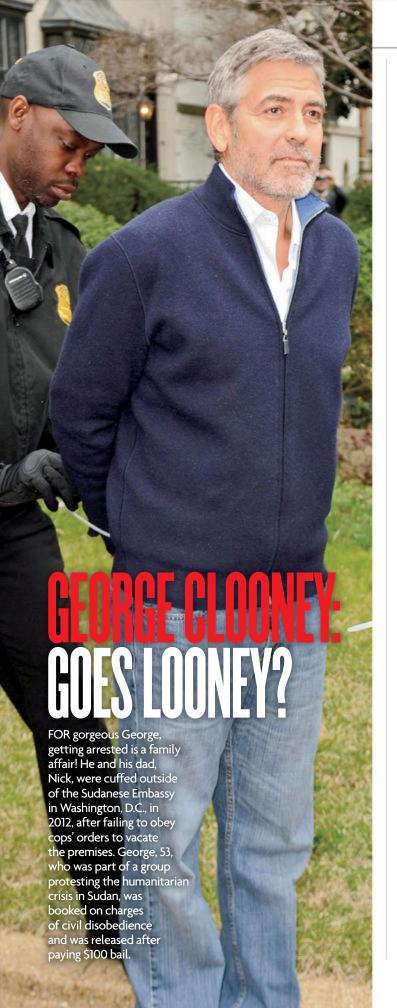

SUPERSTARS FIGHT TO MAKE THINGS RIGHT

EVERYONE has their favorite cause — and that's true even for Hollywood's biggest players. Whether fighting for animal rights or taking a stand for social justice, these celebs use their star power to make a difference in the world. And they're willing to break the law to do it!

THE "Death at a Funeral" star is a lethal weapon on the big screen AND on the activist front, especially when it comes to sticking up for the little guy. In April 2010, 68-year-old Danny was busted in Maryland for protesting in front of the American headquarters of French food-service company Sodexo for their alleged poor working conditions. He received a citation and was then released.

RICKI LAKE: THE FUR FLIES

THE former talk-show host, 46, was tossed in the slammer in 1994, after she and a group of animal lovers burst into the Manhattan offices of designer Karl Lagerfeld and blasted him for using fur to make coats. As she and her cohorts plastered People for Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) stickers on walls, doors, furniture and clothes, Ricki reportedly shouted: "Fur is not a fabric!" Although she was initially booked on two felonies, the charges were later reduced to misdemeanors – criminal trespass and tampering.

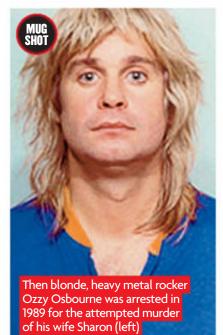

SUSAN SARANDON: BROADWAY BOUND

AN activist since her teen years, the 68-year-old "Bull Durham" beauty has been busted twice for her outspoken antics. In 1982, Sarandon was arrested for civil disobedience in New York City for protesting the tearing down of Broadway's Morosco Theater. And in 1999, she was booked with more than 200 others for taking part in a rally on the steps of NYPD headquarters to protest the police shooting of unarmed West African immigrant Amadou Diallo.

BATTY OSBOURNE CHOKED SHARON

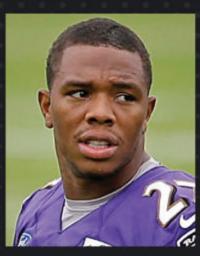

ROCK wildman Ozzy Osbourne's wife Sharon, now 62, is his best friend and soulmate – but during the "Black Sabbath" frontman's darkest days as a dangerous alcoholic, he came very close to taking her life. Waking up in a jail cell in 1989 after a bender and black-out, Ozzy, now 66, heard a cop saying he was under arrest for the attempted murder of his wife. Says the musician-turned-reality star: "I just went numb." Sharon, too, remembers the worst day of her life. "He nearly choked me to death," she says. "He's a gift from God, but if I'd have had a gun I would have used it."

PINT-SIZE PIA'S BIG BLOWUP!

SHE may be only five feet tall, but Pia Zadora, 61, has some super-size anger issues, which exploded on June 1, 2013, when her then-16-year-old son gave her lip about bedtime. According to a police report, the singer/actress, who had been drinking with her husband, Las Vegas police detective Michael Jeffries, freaked out when her son Jordan refused to go to bed at 11 p.m. She turned a garden hose on her entire family, scratched her husband and punched her stepson, Michael Jeffries Jr., 32, when they tried to subdue her. She then began to strangle a terrified Jordan – who managed to phone police. After a SWAT team arrived, the furious ex-Penthouse model was finally arrested on assault charges. She got a 30-day suspended sentence.

RAGING RAY

NFL running back Ray Rice's career was thrown for a shocking loss after video emerged showing him punching his baby mamma Janay Palmer in the face and knocking her out in an elevator at the Revel Casino in Atlantic City.

Amazingly, criminal charges resulting from the vicious February 2014 incident will be dropped if Rice completes a pre-trial intervention program despite the chilling security camera footage.

Incredibly, Palmer wed Rice after the scandal erupted – and the NFL was accused of sweeping the controversy under the rug. Eventually, 200-pound Rice was booted off the Baltimore Ravens and suspended indefinitely by the league. However, the suspension was lifted on appeal and he's free to play again – if any team will have him.

NICOLAS CAGE:

"LEAVING Las Vegas" Oscar-winner Nicolas Cage was charged with public intoxication and domestic violence after exploding on the streets of New Orleans in April 2011, grabbing wife Alice's arm, attempting to drag her into a stranger's apartment. Then he dared police to arrest him as he punched several parked cars. The drunken actor was hauled in and bailed out by reality TV bounty hunter Dog Chapman! Three weeks later all charges were dropped.

MONSTROUS MEL'S VICIOUS BEAT DOWN

"MAD Max" legend Mel Gibson savagely attacked Oksana Grigorieva – as she was holding their infant daughter Lucia – during a January 2010 confrontation at his Malibu mansion.

The "Braveheart" boozer punched Oksana repeatedly in the face and mouth — loosening her teeth and giving her a black eye and symptoms of a concussion. And when she confronted Mel about the incident days later, secretly taping their conversation, the unremorseful actor bellowed: "You fing deserved it!"

Oksana taped Gibson, who

Oksana taped Gibson, who was booked for domestic abuse (right), and told her she deserved the beating!

But Gibson pleaded no contest to one count of spousal battery. The "Lethal Weapon" star was put on probation for three years, ordered into 52 weeks of counseling and 16 hours of community service.

However, he maintains his innocence, insisting Oksana's many tapes were edited to show him in a bad light. Of course, his shocking 2006 DUI arrest — when he was recorded making sexist and anti-Semitic statements to the cops — didn't help his image, either.

The battery charge was scrubbed from Gibson's criminal record

TOMMY LEE HIT 'BAYWATCH' BABE

TATTOOED "Motley Crue" drummer Tommy Lee claimed to be "crazy in love" with Pamela Anderson - but on Feb. 24, 1998, he left the "Baywatch" beauty bruised and terrified after a brutal attack that landed him in prison for assault. It began when Pamela refused to make a phone call. Lee went berserk, hitting her even as she cradled their infant son in her arms. Lee. whose domestic violence rap sheet dated back to 1983, pleaded no contest to felony spousal battery and received six months in jail.

DENNIS AND CARMEN: TAKES TWO TO TANGLE

TALK about a match made in hell! Former NBA star Dennis Rodman, now 53, asked for an annulment immediately following his 1998 wedding to curvy Carmen Electra, claiming he wasn't of sound mind when they tied the knot.

And while the couple ultimately decided to give it a go, their once-torrid romance cooled off in record time. Carmen filed for divorce in April 1999. But in November, they met up at a posh Miami hotel, where they got into a fight so explosive they were both arrested for domestic assault.

Carmen, now 42, had a cut lip and Dennis sustained numerous scratches and bruises when they were hauled into the county jail. They each came up with $2,500 in bail and were ordered to stay at least 500 feet away from each other.

ERIC ROBERTS: WALLBANGER

"THE Dark Knight" star's 22-year marriage to wife Eliza is one of Hollywood's most stable unions – but it wasn't always perfect. In 1995, hottempered Eric Roberts was arrested for brutally shoving Eliza into a wall. Though the charges were later dropped - with the actor never recreating his bad behavior - it wasn't his first brush with the law. Eric. a former Hollywood bad boy with a marijuana and cocaine possession arrest on his rap sheet, had previously appeared in court for fighting with his daughter Emma's mom Kelly Cunningham during a custody case he lost.

"EMPIRE" star Terrence Howard insists he "wouldn't hurt a fly" – but his two ex-wives tell a different story. Both charge he beat them bloody!

Arrested for assaulting his first wife Lori McCommas in 2001, Howard eventually pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct. Cops say he kicked down her door and punched her in the face twice! He had another disorderly conduct arrest for a 2005 dust-up in Philadelphia.

During a year-long marriage to Michelle Ghent, cops were called in 2010. Within a week of their wedding, Ghent claims "The Butler" star slugged her in the face. In the year that followed, she claims he beat her, punched her face, threatened her with a knife and tried to throw her off a balcony!

Terrified Michelle filled for both a divorce and a restraining order – but the pair tried to reconcile with a 2013 trip to Costa Rica.

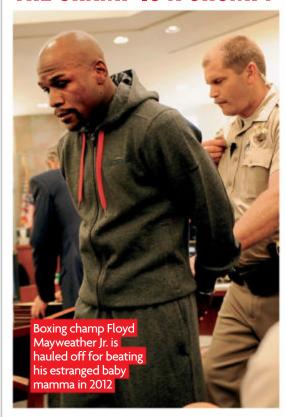

When Michelle later told Howard she didn't think it was going to work between them, the actor got so violent, she says, she had to pepper spray him in self-defense! Howard insists he never hit Ghent, who he claims was trying to ruin his career. A judge granted Michelle a restraining order.

FLOYD MAYWEATHER JR.: THE CHAMP IS A CHUMP!

UNDEFEATED boxing champion Floyd "Money" Mayweather Jr. may be King of the Ring, but his baby mamma insists the world's highest paid athlete ain't nothin' but a two-bit bully.

Mayweather did 87 days in Nevada's Clark County Detention Center for roughing up ex-galpal Josie Harris – in front of their children – before his release on Aug. 3, 2012. Even though they were officially split, the boxer went nuts when he found out Harris was dating another guy.

The 37-year-old slugger crept into her home, yanked her out of bed by the hair as she slept, then kicked and punched her as their kids watched. To this day, Mayweather refuses to address the issue, and his son Koraun brands him a "coward" for failing to come clean.

But the incident wasn't the boxer's first – or only – brush with the law over problems in his personal life. He received suspended prison sentences in 2002 and 2004 for charges of domestic violence and misdemeanor battery. And in 2014 his former fiance Shantel Jackson went to court accusing him of false imprisonment, threatening her with a gun and battery.

SAVAGE SIZEMORE: BAD TO THE BONE

"CELEBRITY Rehab" alum Tom Sizemore has battled drug addiction since he was 15 years old and even uglier demons when it comes to his relationships with women.

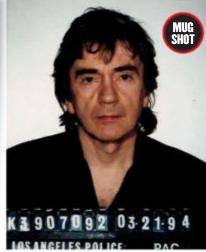

His ex-wife, actress Maeve Quinlan, brought a domestic abuse complaint against him in 1997 but didn't press charges.

However, in 2003, former Hollywood Madam Heidi Fleiss got the "Black Hawk Down" star put away for six months on an assault and battery rap after he smashed her in the jaw during a party at the posh Four Seasons Hotel.

Even though she "loved him a lot," Fleiss decided to go to cops because "what he did to me was wrong" – and he threatened to kill her kid brother. She insisted the violent actor, tape recorded phone calls that revealed the star's menacing behavior. Ironically, the troubled pair joined up again on "Celebrity Rehab" in 2010, but made no attempt to bury the hatchet.

DUDLEY MOORE: Tiny tyrant

AS the adorable drunk in "Arthur," "Cuddly Dudley" Moore was beloved by millions – but his fourth and final marriage to 30-years-younger Nicole Rothschild was filled to the brim with hate.

Shortly before their 1994 wedding, (below), the 5-foot-2 1/2 actor was arrested for domestic violence in L.A. when a backstage spat with Nicole at the Academy Awards ceremony turned violent. After she dropped the charges, they tied the knot as planned.

But their four years together were marked by cruelty. Nicole claimed Moore was a tyrant who frequently beat her. But Dudley's friends insisted HE was the victim of his bullying 5-foot-10 wife. They claimed unstable Nicole smashed the entertainer's belongings and set fire to his beloved music collection when she was high on drugs. She was banned from his 2002 funeral.

SAVAGE "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" star Shelley Malil got what he deserved – a life sentence for cutting his girlfriend to pieces when he caught her with another man!

His victim, Kendra Beebe, is lucky to be alive after suffering punctured lungs and deep gashes on her chest, back, neck and arms in the 2008 butcher knife attack. Maniac Malil stabbed Kendra more than 20 times when he found her drinking wine at her San Diego home with a male pal.

But the 50-year-old Indian-born star insists he didn't intend to kill his on-again, off-again lover. Malil claims he dropped by her house to apologize for stranding her on the beach after a fight a few days earlier and taking her marijuana. He also testified he wanted to warn the blonde he'd sent her co-workers sexually explicit photos, which he knew was wrong.

Kendra insisted the star was full of bull, charging "his testimony was lie after lie" and made it clear Malil was "not a very good actor." At his sentencing, Malil wept and apologized for his crime – attempted premeditated murder and assault with a deadly weapon – saying: "Kendra

FOXY BROWN: NOT SO SLY

TALK about hair-raising! "Chyna Doll" rapper Foxy Brown tossed hair glue at a beauty supply store employee and ended up spending a night in jail.

Foxy – real name Inga Marchand – was fixing her hair in the shop's bathroom in February 2007 when the employee told her the store was closed and she had to leave. Instead of leaving, she squirted him with glue and spat on him as he called 911. Cops in Florida's Broward County charged her with battery and resisting an officer with violence.

She later pleaded no contest to simple battery and resisting arrest. She got six months' probation and paid $5,200 in fines and had to attend anger management classes.

Weezy was released from Rikers in November 2010 after serving eight months of his year-long sentence.

VANILLA ICE: MELTDOWN

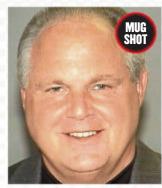

ROBERT Van Winkle – known as Vanilla Ice – scored the first hip-hop single to top the Billboard charts with 1990's "Ice Ice Baby." But in January 2001, he got hot under the collar, and cops in Davie, Fla., arrested him for assaulting his wife, Laura, as they drove down the highway. He admitted ripping out some of her hair to keep her from jumping out of the window. Ice pled guilty to disorderly conduct and was sentenced to probation and family therapy.

In April 2008, Ice was charged with simple battery in Palm Beach County for kicking and hitting Laura during an argument over a bedroom set. The case was later dropped.

JENNIFER CAPRIATI: DRAGNET DRAMA

TEEN tennis prodigy Jennifer Capriati grabbed a gold medal at the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona – but quit in the mid-'90s after being arrested on shoplifting and drug charges.

Capriati, now 38, was pinched for shoplifting a ring in 1993, a crime she claimed was accidental, and the following year she was also arrested and charged with possessing marijuana. She agreed to enter a drug counseling program – and then mounted a comeback.

By 2001, she was back at Number One in the world after winning the Australian Open and French Open titles and getting to the semi-finals at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. Injuries forced her to retire in 2004. A decade later, charges that she battered and stalked an ex-beau in 2013 were dropped after completing community service and anger management classes.

DURING his heyday, "Iron" Mike Tyson was the most feared boxer on the planet – and with good reason. No one was safe from the heavyweight champ's vicious temper in or out of the ring!

Petite 18-year-old Miss Black Rhode Island Desiree Washington found that out the hard way when he raped her in an Indianapolis hotel room in July 1991. Although Tyson insisted their sex was consensual – and still does – the 234-pound bruiser got six years in the Plainfield Correctional Center. He was let out after three.

Once free, the slugger, who'd also been accused of domestic abuse by actress ex-wife Robin Givens, tried to resurrect his career. But the beast's boxing license was revoked after he bit a chunk off rival Evander Holyfield's ear as they clenched in the ring. But judging by his grin in the photo (left), it looks like Chris actually enjoyed it.

DUI DIVA MICHELLE GETS TOTALLY TRASHED

REBELLIOUS "Lost" beauty Michelle Rodriguez was forced to get down and dirty in 2009 after a Los Angeles judge ordered her to clean up the L.A. freeways as punishment for violating her probation for a DUI arrest. Incredibly, her violation included lying to the court about completing her community service hours!

TEEN MOM JENELLE TURNS OLD BAG

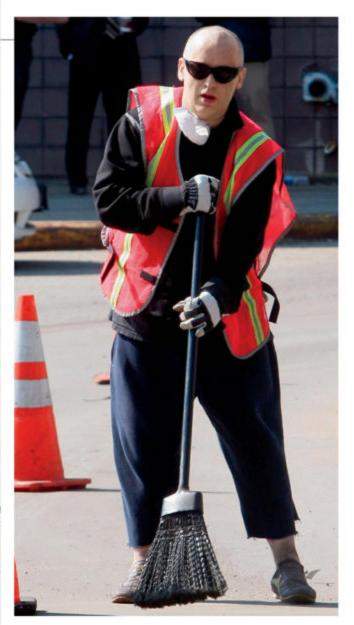

TAKE out the trash! That's what a judge told "Teen Mom" Jenelle to do after she was arrested in 2011 on a drug paraphernalia charge. Jenelle performed part of her 24 hours of community service picking up litter at a local park in Oak Island, N.C. She was also sentenced to 12 months' probation.

PARIS PAINTED INTO A CORNER

LEAVE it to socialite Paris Hilton to wear high heels and a diamond Chanel necklace while painting! The haughty heiress helped volunteers with the Hollywood Beautification Team cover up graffiti in Los Angeles in 2010 after being ordered to perform 200 hours of community service stemming from a cocaine possession charge in Las Vegas. Paris actually performed 228 hours of good deeds, which earned her high praise from the judge overseeing her probation.

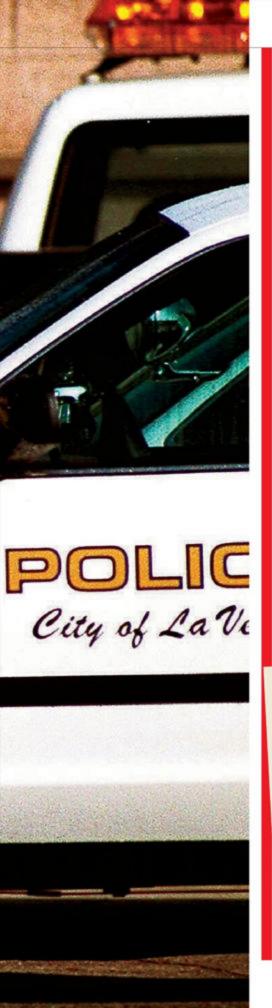

BOY GEORGE SWEEPS CRIME UNDER THE RUG

WHAT a chameleon! We hardly recognized '80s hitmaker Boy George without his colorful makeup and crazy, long locks. In 2006, the former Culture Club singer was ordered to face the music – and sweep the streets of Manhattan for five days with the city's Department of Sanitation – after he lied about a burglary at his NYC apartment. When cops arrived, they found cocaine in his home.

FAMOUS folks are used to getting special treatment, but when stars run afoul of the law, they're handled just like the rest of us, beginning with their booking photos – which become public record. Here's GLOBE's Hall of Shame featuring the best of the worst celebrity mug shots!

--- RANDY TRAVIS ---

The battered country star was found lying buck naked in the middle of a Sherman, Texas, road. Lawmen busted Randy Travis for DUI on Aug. 7, 2012. He was also charged with "retaliation" for allegedly threatening to "shoot and kill" arresting officers. Travis got a fine, probation and community service, and a great big "I Told You So." He'd been busted six months earlier for DUI!

··· COOLIO ···

The rapper's hip-hop mop was braided into spaghetti strands when he was nailed March 9, 2012, during a routine traffic stop. Las Vegas officers brought him in to the same jail where his son Grtis was being held on multiple offenses or felonies. Dad's records search turned up warrants for traffic violations. No so cool, Coolio!

--- JASON LONDON ---

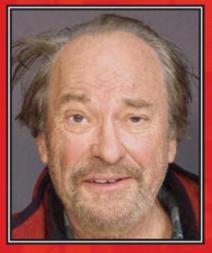

The actor looks "Dazed and Confused"

— AND bruised — in this mug shot, taken Jan. 27, 2013, after a Scottsdale, Ariz., bar fight he obviously didn't win. Jason London then compounded his plight by battling paramedics and was busted for disorderly conduct, assault and then reportedly pooped in the cop car! Lawmen say his wife told them Jason's an a@@$%"& when he drinks. Point taken!

--- WYNONNA JUDD ---

Like her hit song, country singer Wynonna Judd really hit "Rock Bottom" Nov. 13, 2003, when she was busted on DUI charges in Nashville. She lost her license for a year, did probation and completed community service. Like another hit song, she can say "I Saw the Light" about booze, but in 2006, Wy checked into rehab to battle another demon — food addiction.

--- RIP TORN ---

The notorious boozer probably wishes he really was one of the "Men in Black" when he was hauled in by cops in Westchester, N.Y., on DUI charges in December 2006. Rip Torn refused to take a Breathalyzer test after slamming his 1995 Chevy into a truck while making a turn. He paid a $380 fine and had his license suspended for three months – but later got into trouble again.

--- NICK NOLTE ---

The "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" star became a poster boy for outrageous celebrity mug shots with his wild-hair and bruised face after his Sept. 11, 2002, arrest for suspicion of DUI and being under the influence of a controlled substance. Nick Nolte was sentenced to three years' probation, random drug testing, rehab – and a lifetime of ridicule for this wacky mug shot!

--- JAMES BROWN ---

The late Godfather of Soul James Brown didn't appear ready to shout "I Feel Good!" after being busted Jan. 28, 2004, for criminal domestic violence. He paid a fine and didn't have to spend any more time behind bars. The star, who did three years in a juvenile prison for a teenage crime spree, died on Christmas Day 2006.

---JOYCE DEWITT ---

"Three's Company" star Joyce DeWitt appears to be three sheets to the wind while being booked for DUI on July 4, 2009, El Segundo, Calif.! She pleaded no contest and was sentenced to a nine-month alcohol treatment program and paid a $510 fine. But the former TV temptress avoided jail – with three years' probation – sparing her from serving time with some really bad company!

--- MARILYN MANSON ---

Devilish rocker Marilyn Manson was busted July 30, 2001, for an offense he committed during a concert outside Detroit. While on stage, he wrapped his legs around the head of an unwitting security guard and grinded himself against the man. Eww! Manson was slapped with a criminal sexual conduct charge. The musician pleaded no contest to a reduced charge and paid a $4,000 fine.
